[For the Dispatcha] How to Organize a Grange. In response to your correspondent "Non Est," and to meet the general inquiry for information, I submit the following direc-To organize a grange it is necessary to secure the names of not less than nine men and four ladies, nor more than twenty men and ten ladies. The fee for charter-members is three dollars for men and fifty cents for ladies. The fees must be collected before the deputy will be sent to institute the grange. As soon as the necessary names are secured and the fees collected the application must be forwarded to the State secretary, together with the time and place fixed on, also the nearest railroad and derôt. When the place is distant from a public conveyance it will prevent disappointment if some arrange. ment is made to meet the deputy at a named point. If prior engagements prevent the deputy from attending at the appointed time, he will promptly notify the applicants of the fact, so that other arrangements may be made. The General Deputy for Virginia 1s Major J. W. Morton, Eureka Mills, Charlotte, Va. Blanks for organizing granges may be ob tained by application to the deputy or to myself.

M. W. HAZLEWOOD,

Secretary State Grange of Virginia, Richmond, Va. "Spiritual" Phenomena. A remarkable article appears in the London Quarterly Journal of Science, advance sheets of which have been put at our disposal. The writer of the article is Mr. William Crookes, editor of the periodical in which it appears, and a chemist and physicist of high reputation. He has devoted several years to a careful scientific investigation of the so-called phenomena of spiritualism, as presented especially by Mr. D. D. Home and Miss Kate Fox, and he writes of them in the calm critical manner that we should natural ly look for in a man of his character and calling. That the result of his inquiries will create a lively discussion we can hardly doubt. For Mr. Crookes, though he shows none of the symptoms of religious enthusiam, feels bound to admit the reality of the mysterious phenomenh which took place scores and hundreds of times in his own rooms, in broad daylight, under conditions of his own choosing, and under the careful scrutiny of scientific unbelievers. When a man of his stamp tells us that he has seen Mr. Home floating in the air, other solid objects dancing through space, as If the laws of gravity had been repealed; when he describes a "self-luminous cloud" lous and ghostly hands that shaped themselves out of nothing before his very eyes, and rested unresisting in his grasp till they gradually dissolved into impalpable vapor,ve cannot belp listening to him with a certain sort of amazed respect. For we must acknowledge that he firmly believes his own statements, and that he is not a person to be deceived by any common trickery. Mr. Crookes apparently has his own theory of the nature of the manifestations. What that is he does not yet explain. He emphatically rejects, however, two explanations which are often advanced—one, that the mediums are jugglers; the other, that the observers are insane people or fools. Whether there is some unknown physical or intellectual force which can do all these wonders in ways not yet understood, whether the dead return to visit us, or devils come to deceive, Mr. Crookes promises to debate hereafter. This last hypothesis has been argued for some months past by the Catholic World in a series of bold articles embodying some of the same narratives of marvel to which Mr. Crookes now bears testimony. The deductions of the physicist, however, are likely to differ widely from the reasonings of the theologian, and we shall await the inevitable controversy with no little interest. Probably it will end as so many investigations into spiritualistic manifestations have ended before-in destroying the scientific reputation of the investigator and leaving the world unconvinced .- New York Tribune.

Teaching the Law-A Scene in a Kentucky Court-house. [Union County Advocate.]

Queer things occur sometimes in courts, especially in those exercising police authority. Not many hundred miles away from CASHMERES. here there is a county judge whose misfortune it is to have to correct the mistakes committed by his hot-headed fellow-citizens. And we regret to record it, that notwithstanding he is, we believe, some kind of officer (deacon, presiding elder, or something of that kind) in the church, yet we apprehend there is much of the old leaven in him, much of the old Adam that has never been purged out of him by hyssop, penance, or anything else; for he seems on occasions to put more reliance in a "cane," or "brickbat," or Deringer than in turning the unsmitten cheek to receive blow No. 2. Well, among his constituents, one of those blunderers into error having mistaken the law, supposing it allowed any one to pound an old negro on the highway, by way of Christmas frolic, came up a few days ago to ascertain what the law really was on such pleasant pastime. His venerable and worthy progenitor was present to assist his promising offspring in mastering rudiments of a legal education. So, when the trial was over, and the old sinner ascertained that the lecture cost the sum of ten dollars and costs, he flew into a rage and was on the point of braining the ancient African for necessitating such expenditure for legal instruction. Whereupon the court informed him that it would proceed then and there to supply some serious omissions in his own knowle of the law. At this he declared roundly that the whole town couldn't arrest him. The judge intimated that the matter had better be tested at once, and ordered the constable and julior to arrest him. The constable went for the old bediamite with a broom, swearing he "would sweep him up." The young man, whose forehead was covered with bair to within an inch of bis covered with hair to within an inch of his eyebrows, exheluded to make a diversion in his daddy's favor by paying his respects to the judge in person, and advanced rapidly upon him. By this time the Commonwealth's attorney had become alive to the peculiarity of the things going an around him; for be, it understood that both he and the judge gs. The court caught the young man by the collar, rking out a drawer at his ized a Deringer, and bringing lickly to bear upon his antago-informed him it he didn't sucmb he would proceed to shoot the top of wealth's attorney had got well into action.

Having armed himself with a red-painted batchet, he towared over that misguided young man, now limp and palay-stricken with lear, like up infuriated Comanche, his eges gleaning savagely, and each particular leaf of his head standing flercely erect; and instinct with concentrated wrath and full determination to each that interesting specimen of medern kuklux, who looked as if he sorrowed for the freedom of his home down. his head off. By this time the Common-in the lungs. The court interpreted to save his scalp from the glanming tombrawk of the now encoughly around representative of the Obmanon wealth. As the enriged sire was self, demonstrative, though hard presend by the broom and the constable, the ugly, ill-looking Deringer was brought to bear upon him, with the order to "quiet down."—

THE RESERVE THE STREET AND ASSESSMENT OF THE PERSON ASSESSM

In the general scrimmage the jailor, not liking the tooks of the Deriver in the tare less hands of the court, had dropped out of the line of battle, but came in at the wind-the line of battle, but came in at the windup with uttering, in deep, sepulchrai tones, "You better behave yourselves." The magro and white witness made good their escape from the field of battle, and have not been beard of since.

Enact your characes! Exhibit your statue-like tableaux 1-but for scenic effect and naked truth to nature this impromptu scrimmage bents your best efforts?

JOHN BRIGHT ON THE PULPIT. -In a letter published in the Evangelical Magazine, Mr. John Bright says: "As to what is best for the pulpit (reading a sermon or delivering one extemporaneously) I may not venture to say much. In a pulpit a man is expected to speak for a given time on a great theme and with less of exact material than is obtainable on other occasions and on ordinary subjects. And further, a majority of preachers are not good speakers, and perhaps could not be made such. They have no natural gift for good speaking; they are not logical in mind nor full of ideas nor free of speech; and they have none of that natural readiness which is essential to a powerful and interesting speaker. It is possible—nay, perhaps very probable—that if reading sermons was abolished, while some sermons would be better than they now are, the majority of them would be simply chaos, and utterly unendurable to the most patient congregation. Given a man with knowledge of his subject, and a gift for public speaking, then I think reading a mischief; but given a man who knows little, and who has no gift of speaking, then reading seems to be inevitable, because speaking, as I deem it, is impossible. But it must be a terrible thing to have to read or speak a sermon on every week on the same topic to the same people—terrible to the speaker, and hardly less to the hearers. Only men of great mind, great knowledge, and great power can do this with success. wonder that any man can do it. I often doubt that any man has ever done it. I forbear, therefore, from giving a strong opinion on the point you submit to me. Where a man can speak let him speak-it is no doubt most effective-but where a man cannot speak he must read. Is not this the sum of the whole matter?"
